The Isolene is the property of H. W. Flasier, of New York, and Engineer Bennett was preparing her for Winter quarters, when the explosion occurred, yesteriay afternoon.

The can stood five feet from a hot stoye. The gas from the naphtha was lunited by the heat. When the can exploded, the blazing fluid was scattered all about.

his blazing garments by jumping overboard.

When he came to the surface he climbed on board again, and helped put out the fire that was fast eating up the woodwork. The pilot-house was destroyed, and the yacht was damaged to the amount of £2,000. It was in charge of Capt. J. W. Bell.

The Isolene was formerly the Gleam. The Gleam was owned by T. Harrison Gerrett, of Baltimore. It has had an unlucky career.

The steamer Joppa, of the Maryland Steamboat Company, ran it down and sunk it June 7. 1859, and Mr. Garrett was thrown overboard and drowned in the Patapsec river, twelve miles from Baltimore.

OBJECT TO TIGHTS.

Plainfield Citizens Object to High Art in Lithograph.

PLAINFIELD, N. J. Nov. 20.—The good citizens of this town have risen as again in opposition to the display of flash theatrical posters on the local bill-boards.

The war against highly colored lithographs of scantily clad burlesquers has been carried on in a half-hearted way for some years. It has, however, received new life through the efforts of the Ministers' Association, which includes all the Protestant ministers in town.

The Common Council has been asked to pass an ordinance forbidding the posit.

The law was passed for the benefit of John Delmar, who wished last year to have the vacancy caused by the death It will be seen that several letters in he name are missing. If he fails, the last clue will have to be abandoned. The callers at the Morgue this morning were few in comparison with other days since the body was discovered. This is accounted for by Morgue Keeper White by the assumption that the stories of the last identification have been read and accepted as final. John Delmar, who wished last year to have the vacancy caused by the death of Supervisor Attlesy filled by a Twenty-second Ward man. Section 1 of chapter 35, laws of 1835, reads:

If a wearsy shall occur in the office of Supervisor for any of the wards of said city, such vacancy shall be filled by the 'tommon Council. On Saturday, it will be remembered, the body was "positively identified" as that of Josephine Muller, who had come over from Sweden two months ago. Later, however, she was found, alive and married to a man named Reiss.

The letters so far made out on the murdered woman's clothing form part of the name of two girl's who are missing and for whom the police are now searching. The missing girls, however, are very young, while the body at the Morgue is at least twenty-five years old.

Stickever died thirteen days before election. His successor should have been appointed immediately before election day. In that case there would be no question as to the term of office to be served by the new appointee. But the Albermen held over and refused to make an appointment until after election, because they be pileved that by so doing the new man might hold over for another year.

Reorganized Republicans are now thoroughly worked up over the report that there has been a deal between Jacob Worth and Ernest Nathan, the two excladers of the party by which they hope to control the new Board of Aldermen.

The most bitter part of the report to the Republicans is the truncal to the served by the new Board of Aldermen. It is said that Jim Slevin succeeded in effecting the deal.

The other two admitted that they were Brazilians, and Mello took charge of them.

Mr. T. O'Connor, who represents Hard & Rand, of this city, at Rio Janeiro, was among the Leibnitz's passengers. He said that he was at Rio Janeiro when Admiral Stanton saluted Admiral Mello's fleet, and saw him visit Mello aboard his flagship. He says he does not think the rebels have made much progress. Their vessels are anchored in the harbor some distance from shore. They fire at long range, without doing much damage. One fort only sustained serious damage. The rebels have used up a large quantity of ammunition without gaining any material advantage. The people do not take any great interest in the result, and the politicians are apparently the only interested parties in the struggle between Mello and Peixoto.

Admiral Stanton, who was recalled by the Washington authorities, expected to return on the Leibnitz, but did not appear when she sailed.

The Passaic County Hotel is an adjust of the opera-house, and the trustees and the stricter members of the church were horrified at the idea of a sacred work being produced in such proximity to a bar.

Rev. John Crawford issued a card stating that the First Methodist Church had no connection with the production of "Queen Esther." Mrs. J. O. a society had charge of the affair, and that the proceeds would be given to the church.

"Mr. Crawford is a very fine man," she said to a World reporter to-day, "but he is a crank on this question. He says the cantata should not be produced to near a hotel, but the opera-house is the only place with a stage and auditorium large enough to suit us. I have been in a good many hotels, and I never the saw one without a bar; but Mr. Whitehead has promised to close his principal bar on the night of the production. For that matter, every theatre or operahouse has a cafe in the same building, and if the men want to get a drink they do not have to go far.

"The public can be sure that the cantata will be produced. The proceeds will be offered to the church. If refused, the money will be given to the Passaic Home and Orphan Asylum. But it is not every church that will refuse $500 or more when they see it in cash."

One of the officers of the steamer said that Mello's magazine on Governor's Island was exploded the night before they left port. It was about 8 o'clock in the evening. The shock was felt for a long distance.
There was a severe fire made on Fort Villegaignon by Fort Santa Cruz, which is loyal to President Peixoto, on Cet. 17. For some reason the men had been withdrawn from Villegaignon and early in the afternoon the guns of Fort Santa Cruz opened fire and poured shot and shell at it. Much damage was done. At 50 clock Villegaignon's garrison returned, and they began firing at Santa Cruz. A spirited artillery duel was kept up for a time, and then the Government fort stopped firing.
Villegaignon continued her fire until 10 o clock, at times throwing shells over in Nictherby.
